Rebekah Berman, reporter for The Chicago Chronicle, is on the trail of a cataclysmic ecological disaster in southern Iraq that has killed millions of people. Could this have anything to do with a bizarre fish kill in Canada's Yukon that has left biologists puzzled for decades? And what does John Fitzgerald Hawke, an eclectic preacher from the Appalachia region who has global followers, have to do with it? Might his Church of the Next Covenant be involved somehow?

Rebekah is plunged into deadly intrigue with a powerfully connected PR firm, a secret project dubbed The Big Picture, and a most unlikely partnership in the midst of a nuclear strike in the Middle East.

PAUL WAGNER, a marketing executive for a heavy equipment manufacturing company, is also a seasoned veteran of the Chicago ad and public relations market. He has written and published numerous nonfiction pieces throughout his professional career.

Paul lives in central Illinois and is the father of four grown children. When not writing, you might find him kayaking a nearby river in pursuit of a trophy catch or chasing after his energetic grandchildren (when, of course, they're not chasing him!).
